GOMMEL 101

Today is Monday, Aug. 19, and I'm sitting here thinking about our upcoming staff meeting on Wednesday. A couple of times a year we get the entire staff together, to look at each other, to present small department summaries from department managers, and to hear input from the staff. Usually these meetings are rewarding - full of good spirit and lots of laughter. (And we have donuts!)

This time, we have to spend an extra hour (3 instead of 2 hours) to satisfy a state-mandated training requirement to teach staffers basics of human relationships that are so fundamental as to be almost silly. So it won't be as much fun, unless we can laugh at the government idiots who think they know so much more than we do about how to run a business and how to manage our personal lives.

I usually say a little something about the spirit/Spirit behind this place, and this time it occurred to me how fewer and fewer of the staffers knew Gommel (my dad) first hand. So I thought I'd share with them a few "Gommel-isms" from the list I have accumulated over the years as I thought of them. And then I thought that maybe I should share them here in this space, also.

Gommel was a very strong, somewhat polarizing character, whose greatest passion was his commitment to God. And then he loved to teach, especially about values, spirit, good personal habits, and self-discipline. He never stopped teaching all of us, by his words, and mostly by his personal example. He did not suffer fools well; he hated hypocrisy and puton; and he demanded the best of anyone with whom he came in contact. He was a wellspring of intelligence, creativity, wisdom, and sensitivity, seasoned by God's Holy Spirit. (You think I may have ## admired him??)

A few "Gommelisms": "What's worth your life?" He wanted people, and especially voung ones starting out, to think ahead far enough to make good decisions before bad decisions destroyed any chance of a meaningful life. preferably focused on following and obeying God.

"Where is your hope?" and "What did you expect?" he would ask me when I'd get down about the continuing triumph of Evil for now. He was reminding me that God has warned us of the stress of this broken world, and if my hope was in Him. and not in how good the world should be, I'd be full of the joy of the Lord, not the despair of the world. "The joy of the Lord is your strength!" he would say, quoting Nehemiah of the Bible.

"The more words, the less truth." "Speak in telegrams." "Let's not 'talk about' XYZ - let's decide XYZ." In other words, cut the you-knowwhat and let's get this done! A corollary of these: "Say what you mean and mean what you say." "Sin boldly" he borrowed from Martin Luther, meaning that sometimes when the Right and Wrong of a decision is not crystal clear, you have to make the best decision under the circumstances, and then give it all you've got.

Gommel did not want to say to our customers "Welcome to this store" because he felt that it placed a certain distance in the relationship with people who are so much more than just customers. For example, it irritated him when we'd go to dinner at our favorite Sizzler Restaurant, and they would greet us with "Welcome to Sizzler". It made him feel like a quest, not a part of the scene there. Many of vou customers here seem to get that, and when we ask if you need help finding XYZ, you come back with, "No, thanks, I'm in here every day and I KNOW where stuff is!"

Related to the above: "Friends don't shake hands." Think about that. Several times it brought people up short who by habit expected to shake his hand, but even though a handshake is a friendly gesture, it's like "Welcome to Sizzler." It assumes a certain distance or formality in the relationship. Some who understood that lesson will still come up to us and refuse to shake hands since they consider themselves friends. Observe your own interactions, and you'll see that you don't shake hands with family, close friends, and people with whom you spend significant time.

All that leads to his best known phrase, "Peachy keen". When asked how he was doing, which occurred multiple times per day, instead of a mindless response, he came up with "Peachy keen" because it motivated him to actually feel peachy keen. And then he turned to the person and asked sincerely, "Are YOU peachy keen?", and wait for their response, because he cared to hear what they had to say.

If there is anything he would want us to remember about him, it's his commitment to God and how all of this sprang from that. "When the spirit/Spirit is right, everything is right. When the spirit/Spirit isn't right, nothing is right." "It's the spirit, it's the Spirit, it's the SPIRIT!" Attitude and spirit are everything.

I feel so fortunate (not luck, but God's gift) to have been Gommel's daughter, and almost guilty that I had it so good compared to so many.

Thank You, Father, for the example and spirit of this Man of God! Hopefully we all continue to learn from it and pass it on! Hopefully this store is DIFFERENT than any other, based on Your Spirit, and the resulting care and concern for those whom we serve in this community!

ON THE LIGHTER SIDE From the Web. GOD CREATES EVERYONE

A little girl was sitting on her grandfather's lap as he read her a bedtime story. From time to time, she would take her eves off the book and reach up to touch his wrinkled cheek. She was alternately stroking her own cheek, then his again. Finally she spoke up, "Grandpa, did God make you?"

"Yes, sweetheart," he answered, "God made me a long time ago". "Oh," she paused, "Grandpa, did God make me too?"

"Yes, indeed, honey," he said, "God made you just a little while ago." Feeling their respective faces again, she observed, "God's getting better at it, isn't he?"
