

Are You Dizzy Yet?

We're noticing. And change is going to come. . . . Just like in Rome, those in power will resist reform and it will get ugly. In Rome, you had massive civil wars where each political faction tried to annihilate the other. People are somehow under

No, not the merry-go-round type dizzy, as time goes by so fast that everything becomes a blur. That kind of dizzy is very real and disturbing. For example, it seems like only last week that I had a knee replacement surgery, but when I check the calendar, it's actually been four weeks already. Unbelievable.

But that's not the kind of dizzy I'm talking about right now. The dizzy I'm talking about comes from how fast we are circling the drain and losing our country and everything we've thought was normal American ideals, behavior, basic morality, and trustworthy institutions.

It's all gone, and maybe never to return. Again, unbelievable.

One of my favorite writers is Kurt Schlichter, who writes for Townhall.com. Usually he's cynical, sarcastic, and funny, yet this week he wrote an article entitled "Dark Times are Ahead. No One Will Protect You." There was only a glimmer of his normal saucy humor. Instead, he wrote a straight, dark article on our challenging situation in this country. Here are some excerpts.

"Yeah, they're driving our country into the ground, and it's only going to get worse. It's only going to get uglier. I wrote about it in the "People's Republic" books, and I hate to say it, but my prognostications seem to be coming true. We're developing into two different countries, one that's complete chaos and one that's less chaos but still has blue spots of urban chaos within them. I just spent about a week or two in Texas and you know what was different than California? It worked. Yeah, there was the occasional degenerate wandering around, but he didn't get uppity. As one of my neighbors observed, everybody's got a gun in his car, and it's perfectly legal. It's not legal in New York. No, the only crime there is defending other citizens. . . ."

"What can't be sustained won't be sustained, and this is unsustainable. A reckoning is coming."

" . . . We're still near the top of the slippery slope, for now. But there's plenty of political oppression here. Ashli Babbitt got murdered. January 6 dissidents and people praying at abortion clinics are getting thrown into prison forever. The most popular politician in America and the number one candidate for president is being publicly framed in addition to having his livelihood stolen. . . . The idea that we're not supposed to notice the disaster that is overtaking our own country is ridiculous."

the impression that this can't happen here. Why the hell they think that? Look at what the ruling class here thinks of you. Look at what it tells you. We have that senile, corrupt, perverted, old zombie telling us he will turn the F-16s on us if we get too rowdy, and is there any evidence that says he wouldn't do it to preserve what he and his so-called elite compadres believe is theirs? . . .

"Dark times are ahead. Be watchful. Be prepared. Buy guns and ammunition to lawfully protect yourself, your family, your community, and your Constitution. Because no one else will protect them for you."

You know, I really hate to write this kind of article, that is all negative and depressing. I really, really want to do something upbeat, humorous, and inspirational. And there are upbeat things to write about, just not on the national and local scene that are about to crash onto our heads.

The international scene is no better, and maybe worse, for the time being.

Kurt Schlichter has written several novels about the United States breaking into two countries, but his newest, "The Attack", is about an attack on the U.S., from INSIDE the U.S., during which thousands and thousands of people are brutally killed, much like what happened in Israel on October 7, when Hamas surprised and murdered 1200 Israelis in ways you never want to see.

We KNOW that we are circling the drain, about to go down. We KNOW that there isn't much time before something awful happens, that is, if we are paying attention. So the question is, what do we do about it? What can we do about it?

We who live here in the desert have done one of the most important things one can do: we live 'way outside the urban sludge of Southern California. That at least gives us some distance from what might take place down below.

We also live in San Bernardino County which, while not perfect and very annoying at times, seems to have levelheaded leadership. When our elected sheriff tells our local sheriff to pass on to us that all of us should get Concealed Carry permits, we know that there is an imminent threat that the Sheriff's Dept. cannot adequately cover. So we should take that seriously.

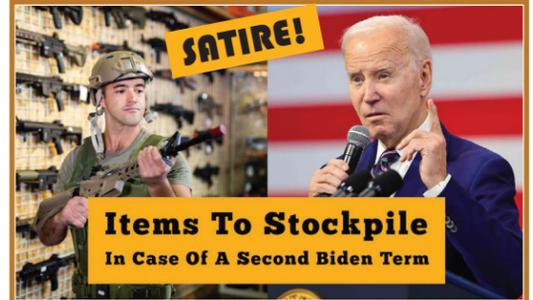

The most important thing we MUST do is to get right with God: turn away from those things in our lives that He hates (we do know what they are, for the most part), ask His forgiveness, and commit the rest of our lives to Him. That means we promise to obey Him, and we do our best to find other Believers to meet with, giving us strength and spiritual reinforcement as we seek to follow God's path for our lives.

It won't be easy, and we may find ourselves persecuted by the authorities, who believe me, are writing regulations to isolate those of us who resist their evil she-nanigans. So far, we haven't seen that kind of persecution yet, but it's coming.

Actually, that is upbeat and inspirational! What could be better than to be free of concern for what bad things might happen to us as we have a wonderful future with our Creator Father (Daddy!) for eternity? I can't think of anything better!

With Joe Biden somehow still alive and Kamala Harris less likable than bunions, it looks like Biden will be up for re-election.

Should Joe Biden win in November, preparation will be key. But what exactly should conservatives start hoarding in case that happens?

The Babylon Bee has put together the following helpful list of must-haves for conservatives in the event of another four years of Biden:

1. Adult diapers: Just so Biden can't have them. Vive la résistance!
2. Cows: After Biden bans them for farting too much, ribeyes will be in short supply.
3. History books that show pictures of white people: As Google AI has shown, history could look a lot different in a few years.
4. One of those maps to push little plastic soldiers around on: A convenient and fun way to keep track of everything that happens during World War 3.
5. Virtual reality goggles: Made for such a time as this!
6. Earplugs: Odds are, you'll be hearing a lot of Kamala cackling before too long.
7. Babies: We're going to need to stockpile a lot of them to turn things around.
8. Ibuprofen: You'll have plenty of headaches from bashing your head into a wall every day.
9. Extra pair of golden Trump sneakers: Click your heels three times, you may just find yourself back in the America you remember.

What are you waiting for? November is right around the corner. Get to work and start stockpiling now!
