

I Am Too Comfortable

From Amir Tsarfati, Jesus-believing teacher in Israel, from his Telegram Channel.

Israel grieves for each and every soldier killed in this ugly war.

From Hillel Fuld, an American Israeli who lives in Israel and works in technology. Posted on X.

I really don't think you understand the absolute miracles that we witnessed last night here in Israel. [October 1] In fact, I am sure you don't. Let's break this down.

Israel has three air defense systems, each one of them a technological wonder and that's not me saying it. That's Dr. Gold who basically invented the Iron Dome who told me that. The level and sophistication of the Iron Dome is simply unparalleled.

But the Iron Dome only knows how to detonate short range rockets or missiles within a 70 km range, give or take. Then Israel has the David's Sling system. That knows how to deal with mid range missiles up to approximately 300 km. Then we have the Arrow system that literally detonates missiles that can fly outside of the earth's atmosphere. That has a range of about 2,400 km!!

Last night, as Iran rained down ballistic missiles on Israel, all three defense systems were activated and implemented to perfection. The chances of all of these incredibly complex systems working in unison as flawlessly as they did last night, are basically non-existent. If one thing went wrong, if one of those ballistic missiles hit an apartment building, a shopping center, or an army base, we would now be burying hundreds of Israelis. And all of that is not even the biggest miracle.

A few hours ago, I got a WhatsApp message from a good friend who is a senior executive at Microsoft and who wasn't exactly a God-fearing Jew. Until yesterday. Here is what he wrote me.

"If you're looking for miracles man - last night I started believing. Missiles hit all around me but none of them hit my house or any house, for that matter."

He elaborated some more and shared info about the missiles that he watched land just meters away from very strategic places in Israel, to say the least. Each one of those defense systems is, in and of itself, pretty miraculous, but what is even more insane is the low casualty numbers from the rockets and missiles that were NOT intercepted.

Where did those missiles go? I'll tell you where. They landed in sand, in water, and in "Empty spaces". Have you been to Israel?

It's a microscopic country. What empty spaces? Where are these empty spaces? How have hundreds of Iranian ballistic missiles all either get detonated by miraculous systems or totally miss their mark and land in empty spaces causing zero casualties and minimal damage?! How?? . . .

But if you know anything about what had to happen last night and throughout this war in general, for such a low number of casualties, you'll know that what we witnessed last night was the equivalent of God splitting the sea right before our eyes. . . .

You don't want to call yesterday an act of God? That's your choice, but like my Microsoft friend, if you look at these events objectively, you'd have a really hard time seeing those hundreds of deadly missiles land in empty spaces and not see the hand of God. Last night was an incredible display of the collaboration between two of the powers that protect the Jewish people: The IDF and Hashem [God].

Last night will go down in history right alongside many of Israel's accomplishments in this war including the beepers and the unprecedented low ratio between combatant and civilian, as a military operation the likes of which the world has never seen. Ever!

Last night will be analyzed by military strategists and experts for generations. Last night, we witnessed history. Last night we witnessed open miracles. Last night, we witnessed God in all His glory watching over His children.

From Linda Gommel, comfortable American, whose daily challenges consist of choosing how many sizes of each cereal flavor to carry, and what kiddie candy to order for Halloween and Christmas.

Yes, sometimes I feel really frustrated at the shallow nature of the job I do:

I live in the very prosperous, well-fed, mostly peaceful United States.

I help run a grocery and hardware store in the wonderful town of Lucerne Valley, hours away from all of the urban sludge "down below".

I spend my time pricing and overseeing thousands of items, many of which are duplicative, unnecessary, and exist to please that one or ten people who just have to have that brand/flavor of something or other.

At home, I have a loving doggie who I can spoil all I want, a warm and comfortable bed, and so much food in the fridge that we work to eat it all before it gets too old. Yes, and we have five (5!) cats, too, all pets, well fed, and loved.

As I sit here with all this comfort and plentiful everything, I can't help but think about those who are suffering all over the place: here in the U.S., many stranded residents of the Carolinas, Florida, and Tennessee, whose lives are destroyed by an unusually destructive hurricane, with very little help from government agencies; in Ukraine, cities and infrastructure are destroyed, families have lost everything and especially family; in Nigeria, whole villages and churches are burned while all Christians are butchered or burnt; or in Israel, where missiles are falling all around, and their young men and women are fighting nasty battles on all sides and many dying.

I ask God WHY they suffer and I'm so pampered. Shouldn't I go help somewhere and do SOMETHING to contribute to their efforts or anything to help them directly?

You know what He told me? He said, "You are where I placed you to be 'for such a time as this.' And by earning income from working full time, you are in a position to send money and support to those very places where there is so much suffering.

"Just be thankful, stay strong in the Spirit, and keep on keepin' on."

Yes, Father. Thank You for all the miracles. Please alleviate the suffering.
